A MODERN NIMROD

L. V. McWhorter's Border States.

The following interesting letter was a reluctant compliance with the request of my father for a brief synopsis of a hunter's career. Bearing no date, it was written in April 1907, and is the record of a typical mountaineer, a simile of the hundreds who have spent their lives in killing game throughout the ranges of the mighty Alleghenies. In 1889, my father visited Mr. Arbogast, and went with him to one of his bear traps some three or four miles from his house and up the Greenbrier River. The trap was constructed of logs, and contained a yearling bear, which was dead. The hunter had delayed his rounds one day too long.

"Dear Dr. J. M. McWhorter:

I will try to answer a few of your questions. I killed first deer in 1848 with a flint lock rifle. About 1852 I had the lock changed to percusion. I killed the majority (of deer) with this mountain rifle. In 1878 I got a 45-60 winchester. The first fall after I had the flint lock changed I killed 8 deer, next fall 20; next fall 25. After that I killed from 25 to 30 every fall. 32 was the most I killed in one fall. I killed 2 to 5 Red Deer every summer which were not counted in fall hunts at that time. I kill two at one shot 3 different times. I killed 4 a day 2 (twice) I killed 5 in half day out of six I saw with muzzle loader. I made an estimate I have killed between 6 and 7 hundred deer. 25 was the highest number I saw in one day—I killed and caught several Bear—I shot one wolf and poisoned and caught several others in trap We have had 8 sheep killed it sight of house and many less numbers killed at different times by wolves, bears and panthers. I killed 2 panthers in one day. My father had a dog that treed 11 panthers that he killed. Dog went out on his own accord and treed one. Panther came down and killed the dog. Was snow on the ground—was a young dog along with him came back next morning wounded by the panther. Father took his back track to where the old dog was killed. The panther had carried him into a laurel thicket and had eaten him about half up and was laying by the dog. When father followed the trail to where the dog was the panther walked away Father went about two hundred yards in the thicket. Panther had stopped twice in that distance til he saw Father coming, so he thought. Was a soft snow in April which made things plain.

A bear came at night when I was a small boy father was not at home—took a small hog from where they lay at night before we had gone to bed; heard it squeal as the bear carried it off. Must have been 200 yards away when stopped squealing. The hog bed was about 50 yards from the house. Second night after, it came back caught a fat hog in pen about 30 feet from house. Father heard it squeal went out with gun was too dark to see it. He hallooed and as it climed over pen he shot at the noise did not hit it. I had a salt lick for deer at the root of a chestnut tree; deer and groundhogs dug down through the roots. Went there one morning to salt it—a deer had put its head down between the roots got its head fast was dead, and warm yet. I had killed a number of deer there before and after—I killed an eagle that had swallowed about 6 inches of a deer's rib one end was broken off slanting very sharp the other end being a joint was round. This end was in its craw the other end stuck out about 2 1-2 inches to one side of back bone. The part that stuck out was bleached as white as a bone that had lain on the ground several years, and wore as smooth as if it had been done with sand paper. I suppose in using its wings the feathers wore it smooth.

I only had one close call in the woods that I know of. Was out hunting snow was about one foot deep commenced sleeting in a short time crust on snow bore me up and slick as glass. Feet slipped from under me was on a steep hillside. Down the hill I went feet front about 30 yards to a large log, the gun stopped against the log. I went over turned head in front about 30 yards, run into a bunch of dead brush which caught in my clothes by breaking off, the snags caught which I think saved me from getting killed or badly hurt. It was about 100 yards to stream of water nothing in way to stop me. I worked my way back to where my gun stopped at log, by breaking through the snow crust with heel of shoes. Then used breech of gun to break through crust of snow, until I got down to a stream of water which led to river and home. I met Father about half a mile from home going to look for me. I was born in a cabin 20 feet from the house I now live in, 72 years ago 6th of last March 1907 lived here all the time.

I wish I had kept a statement of every day's hunt during my life taken down every evening. I give this as a true statement &ct.

Kindest Regards to any one who by chance may read this statement.

A. M. V. Arbogast.
Dunlevie, Pocahontas Co. W. Va.

Henry De Man.—Of all the European countries, Belgium, that seemed the hardest hit by the war, has been the quickest to recover. One year after the armistice, the output in all but a few industries had again reached the pre-war level. The number of employed workmen, which was about 700,000 in November, 1918, was less than 100,000 a year later. Emigration of labor is hardly above the prewar rate. The cost of living is only about two-thirds of what it was a year ago, and in spite of the favorable foreign exchange, the downward trend continues. The most characteristic fact of all is perhaps that the output of coal which in most countries is going down steadily has increased continuously and is now practically as high as before the war.

WOOL MARKET

One of the very few important commodities that has decreased in price in the past year is raw wool. With the price of cloth, clothing and all materials into which the use of wool enters being quoted at prices enormously high the price of wool has dropped to pre-war figures. A wool merchant was sought for an explanation of this. Isaac Hirsch, head of the firm of Hirsch Bros., wool and hide dealers in this section for more than thirty years, made the following statement for the Evening Times:

"I am asked every day, 'What is wrong with wool?' The answer is not hard to find.

"In 1914, before the beginning of the World War, the average price was 25c. In 1917 it rose to 60c; in 1918, under Government control, it went to 70c, and today it is 39c, and may go lower. The reason for this slump is partly explained by the fact that at the beginning of the war, England immediately assumed control and purchased all wool raised in its possessions; this included Australia and New Zealand, which are the largest wool producing countries. This supervision, or control, ended on June 1st of this year, causing an enormous quantity of wool to be thrown on the market. Aside from this, our Government had left a large supply after the war ended, some of which has been sold at public auction, but there yet remains fifty million pounds, for which the Government cannot find a buyer. It is certainly parodoxical that after the great use and waste of wool during the war that there should yet remain such an enormous over-supply. We produce annually three hundred million pounds and our average consumption is about five hundred million pounds; consequently, we must import almost as much as we produce. But, there is no trouble to do this, as these is much over a billion pounds of wool lying in Australia today; and South America also has a very large quantity.

"One naturally must sympathize with the wool growers; the winter was a hard one, all kinds of feed were scarce and high—both cattle and sheep were underfed and came through in poor condition to withstand the later storms—as a matter of fact, losses were heavy; and naturally, farmers were hoping that a good price for their wool would recoup them for a good share of their losses and that this would be supplemented by a good lambing season—but, both sources of revenue have failed. The manufacturing situation is also bad. The textile mills are either closing down or working three or four days a week. The prime cause of this is the scarcity of funds, which has scared not only the manufacturer but the retailer—who in turn, has cancelled his orders. It is frequently stated that the decline in wool would cause a great decline in clothing. This may occur, but the fact remains that in an all-wool suit of clothes there is not five dollars worth of wool There is a movement on foot by the farmers throughout the country to hold their wool. Whether this is wise only the future will tell.

"Taking a broader view, the ebb tide of high prices must be stemmed; if such an expedient as holding wool will revive the market, it would be a miracle. It seems the result can only be to delay, not avert, the inevitable readjustment of values."—New York Evening Times.

We were sorry to hear of the death of Miss Blanche Dilley which occurnear Rimel, July 2, 1920. She was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. G. Dilley, of Renick, and was 27 years of age. Her mother and one little sister preceded her to the grave several years ago. She leaves her father one brother, O. M. Dilley, of Frost; one sister, Myrtle Dilley, of Renick, and a host of other relatives and friends to mourn her death. Funeral services were conducted at New Hope Church by Rev. C. B. Rutledge, of Frost, July 4, and her body laid to rest by her mother at the old home place. May she rest in peace.

A Friend.

John Burroughs.—I do not see that nature is any more solicitous about the well-being of a man than she is, say, about the well-being of trees. She is solicitous about the well-being of all life, so far as the conditions of life favor its development and continuance—men and trees alike. But all have to run the gauntlet of some form of hostile forces—the trees one kind, man another. What I mean is that evil waits upon all—hindrances, accidents, defeat, failure, death.
